HARVEST

The 2017 harvest in the El Rosario Valley was marked by medium to low yields which contributed to wines with good volume and concentration. Early summer was warmer than previous years, however the temperatures dropped starting in the month of March, achieving very good phenolic ripening and a delicately balanced acidity. Harvest took place during the last days of April with very healthy grapes with good integrity.

VINEYARD

The grapes for our Matetic Syrah come from sectors with unique characteristics within the El Rosario Valley, selected for their enormous potential for quality and consistency in the production of this variety. One of the blocks is characterized by soils that are almost flat, with a very deep, loamy granitic texture. The other block is 100% granite soil in a state of decomposition, with some quartzite rocks and volcanic silt. Only Biodynamic techniques are used in the handling of the soil fertility, through natural methods such as the use of specific plants cultivated between the rows of grapevines, bolstered by compost and work in the soil. This allows us to achieve very good, deep root development with natural irrigation, or dry-farming, during a large part of the season. This wine is a blend of the 174 and 470 clones, with the first lending unequalled aromatic complexity with spiced notes, and the second lending volume and texture on the palate.

VINIFICATION

The grapes were harvested by hand into 10kg bins according to the Biodynamic calendar, and arrived at the cellar, where they were cooled while undergoing a strict selection of bunches and grapes. The grapes then underwent a cold maceration for 10 days, then fermented with natural yeasts. Just 50% of the grapes are destemmed, while the other half remained in whole clusters, adding increased texture and complexity. Various techniques of punchdowns and pumpovers of the cap were used for a very elegant extraction of color, aromas, and flavors. The wine remained in French oak barrels for 22 months, before being racked and bottled, unfiltered. The bottled wine then aged in our cellar for 3 years, waiting for its optimal point to be tasted.

TASTING NOTES

Dark violet in color, and deep. On the nose, it's a Syrah with great varietal typicity, showing its coastal origin with lots of complexity: elegant notes of pepper, wet earth, meat, spices, and chocolate, with subtle violet notes. On the palate, Matetic Syrah 2017 is characterized by its volume and concentration, with smooth, rounded tannins and great depth with flavors that are reminiscent of black fruit with iodized notes. An intense, elegant finish.

FOOD PAIRING

We recommend pairing the wine with all types of red meat, including those with strong flavors such as lamb, grilled meats in general, as well as aged cheeses with intense flavors and textures. Serve at 18°C. We recommend decanting the wine before service.
